

Cities, Towns and Places in Phone Books

The names of the following places in Alberta were from early settlers, translated Indian names, railway stops, land surveyors and many other sources. The places designated as a “Toll Station” were telephone microwave transmitting sites and named after the area or closest named area. Many places eventually grew and became villages and towns. Some of the places in Alberta do not exist anymore but the area is still referred to by local residents. Most small centers have become part of the phone books of the closest large center.
